

Popular Science Article

Popular science articles are interpretations of science for the general public. You may choose to write about an article detailing the background, the importance, the innovative aspect, and the potential applications of your research project. You may also choose to write about a subject related to the CRBLM (brain, language, and music), explaining it to the general public.

Here is a checklist of all elements that should be present in your manuscript:

- My manuscript is in layman terms and without scientific jargon explaining a relevant topic of the CRBLM OR my research project.
- My manuscript has references in APA Style.
- My manuscript is factual and does not contain biases nor my opinion.
- My manuscript has between 500-1000 words.
- My manuscript is in Times New Roman 12-point font and double spaced
- Titles and subtitles in my manuscript are in bold.
- I used an active voice in my text and have proper grammar.
- The structure of my article is as follows:
 - Title in bold
 - Lead: 5 to 8 sentences answering the 5Ws (Who, What, Where, When, Why) with a real life example
 - Section titles in bold to introduce various aspects of my manuscript
 - Body of your manuscript: 2 to 4 paragraphs presenting the various aspects of my manuscript
 - Conclusion: Paragraph that sums up my manuscript
- I found at least one image to act as visual aid for my manuscript named according to the Author Instructions document.
- I have read and followed the Author Instructions document for more formatting details.

To submit:

In a zip folder in your email to crblmjournal@outlook.com, please include the following:

- Manuscript in accordance with guidelines of your type of submission in .doc or .docx format.
- All figures and tables named accordingly.
- Signed copy of the Publication Rights Agreement with the signature of the thesis advisor/researcher/PI involved in the author's project and/or manuscript.
- Signed copy of this document, along with the signature of another person who has read over your manuscript.

As submitting author, I declare I have read the present document, respected every element of the checklist, and have signed below. I understand that the failure to respect an element of the checklist will result in the automatic rejection of my manuscript.
